Preamble to the Organisation Plan, March 2004

It shall be the aim of the Rectorate's (Rektorat) endeavours to improve the outline conditions for the University of Vienna as one of the leading universities in Europe. Thereby, the Rectorate (in accordance with the provisions of the Universities Act 2002) is of the opinion that, in a logical chronological order, the Organisation Plan (Organisationsplan) has to be drawn up before the development plan and therefore before the negotiations about target agreements: the development planning in research and teaching can only be successful if there is a dialogue with strategically competent organisational units (Organisationseinheit).

On the basis of international comparisons and developments, on the basis of the experiences gained from the University Organisation Act 1993 (Bundesgesetz über die Organisation der Universitäten – UOG 1993) as well as of a detailed knowledge about the University of Vienna, a paper on the “Basic Parameters (Eckpunkte) of the Organisation and Development Plan” was published in July 2003 in order to provide a basis for the discussion about the steps to be taken.

Among the most important aims (“Basic Parameters”) are the stronger emphasis on an orientation towards research and therefore an enhancement of university teaching, a better organisation of the studies, a more international orientation of the studies, the development of the University of Vienna as an attractive centre for young researchers, as well as an improvement of the general administrative conditions for researchers and students.

In August 2003, five project groups were invited to work out proposals for a structuring of the scientific field on the basis of the “Basic Parameters” by involving international experts. In October 2003, there were numerous talks and information events with university staff. Thereupon, the Rectorate drew up the now available draft of the organisation plan.

When dividing the University of Vienna into scientific organisational units the Rectorate was guided by the following principles:

- formation of meaningful subject units with scientifically immanent references (orientation towards research), a balance between innovation and continuity with a pooling of subjects and/or a bundling of subjects as organisational units
- international orientation of the studies offered, an improved organisation of the studies
- institutionalisation of a professional management (strategic and innovative abilities)
- improvement of the administrative basic conditions for students and researchers

After having taken into account all available criteria and after many internal talks within the University, as well as after having considered the recommendations of the University Board, the Rectorate proposes a structuring of the University of Vienna into 15 faculties and two centres; a third centre (Centre for Molecular Biology) shall be created as soon as an agreement with the Medical University of Vienna has been entered into that is concerned with a co-operation in the fields of Biochemistry and Molecular Cell Biology as well as Microbiology and Genetics along the lines of the Schatz/Nasmyth expert's report “The Future of the Vienna Biocenter” dated October 2003.

Thereby, the aim has been to create a clear number of organisational units and to implement a two-level structure (in accordance with the Universities Act 2002). It is only with an organisational scheme of this kind that the prerequisites can be created to ensure a functioning “culture of target agreements”, in which the achievements of individual researchers and/or task groups can be considered by a performance-related (as opposed to hierarchical) allocation of resources. In particular, the promotion of the advancement of young researchers and the adherence to the guidelines of Gender Mainstreaming and the Equality of Opportunity have been taken into account.

An external evaluation of the organisation of the University of Vienna is envisaged for 2009.

Organisation Plan of the University of Vienna

Prepared by the Rectorate,

Unanimously adopted by the Senate of the University of Vienna on 5th of October, 2006,

Unanimously approved by the University Board of the University of Vienna on 13th of October, 2006.

1st chapter Scope of validity

§ 1. The Organisation Plan of the University of Vienna shall regulate the organisational units of the University of Vienna as well as the scope of duties of its functional institutions.

2nd chapter Scientific organisational units

§ 2. Scientific organisational units of the University of Vienna shall be the faculties and centres.

Faculties

§ 3. Faculties shall be organisational units of the University with research and teaching duties.

Centres

§ 4. Centres shall be organisational units of the University which, besides research and teaching duties, shall perform special tasks for the University of Vienna or shall either focus predominantly on teaching or to research.

Governance of a faculty or of a centre

(1) A university professor, or an associate professor (§ 122, subsection 3 Universities Act 2002) having leadership qualities, especially in the field of human resources management, shall be appointed (§ 20, subsection 5 Universities Act 2002) Head of the faculty or of the centre by the Rectorate upon the university professors' majority proposal. Any such proposal shall contain the names of at least three qualified persons and can be rejected by the Rectorate in well founded reasons. A proposal containing less than three names shall only be admissible for reasons justified by the facts.

(2) In each faculty and in each centre, one or two qualified deputies of the Head shall be designated by the Rectorate upon the Head's proposal and after having consulted the Faculty Conference (Fakultätskonferenz) (§ 7). In exceptional cases, because of the size of the faculty or its variety of subjects, also three qualified deputies can be appointed. Only members of the scientific university staff can be appointed as deputies. At the faculties, the deputies have to be in possession of the authorisation to teach (venia docendi). When appointing the deputies, a balance of the subjects and the groups of people represented at the faculty have to be considered. The Rectorate can reject the proposal for justified reasons.

(3) The Head and the deputy shall be appointed for a period of two years, and the period of office of the deputy shall terminate when a new Head takes office. If the Head resigns from his or her office during the period of office, the successor and the deputy of the successor shall be appointed for the remaining time of the period of office. Re-appointments shall be admissible.

(4) The Head or the deputy can be removed from office for a gross dereliction of duty, for a criminal conviction, or for the absence of physical or mental qualification or for well-founded confidence violation.

(5) The Head of the faculty shall have the title “Dean of ...”; his or her deputy shall have the title “Vice Dean of ...”.

(6) The Head shall be exonerated from his or her duties in research and teaching to an extent to be defined in the target agreement in consideration of the size of the faculty or centre and the duties involved therewith, as a rule by 50 percent.

The Rectorate can promote the advancement of these research platforms within the frame of the target agreements with the faculties or the centres.

(2) With a view to promoting task groups with a new activity in new, innovative and at the University of Vienna hitherto not yet established areas of research with high potential for development, the Rector can, upon their application, in terms of a promotion of the advancement of young researchers, and after a positive evaluation, release in particular young, highly-qualified researchers from their duties in teaching and administration for a period of time of up to three years and entrust them exclusively with research tasks. The organisational and financial outline conditions for their innovative research have to be made available for them. To compensate the shortage of workforce of researchers that have been released from their duties in teaching and research, resources needed have to be made available for the faculty concerned.

Scientific Advisory Board (Wissenschaftlicher Beirat) of the faculty or the centre

§ 10. (1) Each faculty and each centre can be advised by a Scientific Advisory Board which supports the faculty or centre in its development planning and in fulfilling the target agreement. The establishment of a Scientific Advisory Board shall be stipulated in the target agreement between the Rectorate and the Head of the faculty or centre.

(2) The Scientific Advisory Board shall consist of at least three and, at the most, five independent, internationally renowned researchers who in particular stand out for their ability of a strategic further development of the research areas of the faculty or centre.

(3) Each member of the scientific university staff with authorisation to teach (venia docendi) as well as members of the Scientific Advisory Board shall have the right to propose members for the Scientific Advisory Board. After having heard the Head and the deputy and after an opinion delivered by the Faculty Conference, the Rectorate shall select the members of the Scientific Advisory Board from among such proposals and shall appoint them for a term of office of four years. When appointing them, a subject-related balance within the Scientific Advisory Board has to be considered. A re-appointment shall be admissible once.

(4) When a Scientific Advisory Board is established for the first time with three members, notwithstanding subsection 3, one of its members shall be appointed for a period of office of two years. When a Scientific Advisory Board is established for the first time with four or five members, two of these members, notwithstanding subsection 3, shall be appointed for a period of two years.

(5) The members of the Scientific Advisory Board can be removed from office by the Rectorate with the Head of the faculty or centre's consent, for a gross dereliction of duty, for a criminal conviction, or for the absence of physical or mental qualification or for well-founded confidence violation.

(6) The Scientific Advisory Board shall be heard before the conclusion of the target agreement between the Head of the faculty or centre and the Rectorate, and shall deliver its opinion concerning the fulfilment of the target agreement by the faculty or centre.

Scientific Advisory Board (Wissenschaftlicher Beirat) of the University

§ 11. (1) For its counselling, the Rectorate can establish a Scientific Advisory Board. Such Board shall analyse and observe the University of Vienna within the context of the international academic landscape.

(2) The Scientific Advisory Board shall consist of seven independent and internationally renowned researchers who stand out for their knowledge about the subjects represented at the University of Vienna.

(3) The Senate and the University Board (Universitätsrat) shall each select two persons out of the Rectorate's proposal, which has to consist of at least 14 persons. These four members shall then propose three further persons to the Rectorate to be appointed.

(2) Upon the Director of the Studies Programme's proposal, and after having heard the Studies Conference (Studienkonferenz), the Rectorate shall appoint a qualified deputy or two qualified deputies for the Director of the Studies Programme. In exceptional cases, because of a large number of students to be attended to or the variety of subjects, also three qualified deputies can be appointed. In well-founded cases, the Rectorate can reject the proposal.

(3) In the event that the appointment is not made within due time pursuant to subsection 1 or subsection 2, the Rectorate can appoint a member of the scientific university staff with his or her consent, as provisional Director of the Studies Programme or as deputy. The provisional function shall terminate with the appointment of a Director of the Studies Programme pursuant to subsection 1 or of a deputy pursuant to subsection 2. Before such provisional appointment of a Director of the Studies Programme, the students' representatives of the subjects concerned, the Faculty Conference concerned or the Faculty Conferences concerned as well as the Heads of the faculties or centres concerned (subsection 1) shall, if possible, be heard.

(4) The office period of the Director of the Studies Programme and of the deputy shall be two years. The period of office of the deputy shall terminate when a new Director of the Studies Programme takes office. Supplement: Explanatory Notes on the Organisation Plan

Fundamentals and History

After a discussion on the “Basic Parameters of the Organisation and Development Plan” with the Deans pursuant to the University Organisation Act 1993 (Bundesgesetz über die Organisation der Universitäten – UOG 1993), with the Constituent Convention (Gründungskonvent), with the Senate pursuant to the Universities Act 2002 (Universitätsgesetz 2002) and with the University Board (Universitätsrat), five project groups were established by the Rectorate in July 2003 who, by involving international experts, were invited to prepare proposals for an organisational structure of the scientific fields of the University. Upon the request of the Senate pursuant to the Universities Act 2002, in each project group, at least one member of the Senate pursuant to the Universities Act 2002 was represented, among them also student representatives.

In the beginning of October 2003, the results of the project groups were presented. Proposals on a re-organisation of the University of Vienna, on new managerial organs, on the internal structure of the future organisational units for research and teaching, on questions of the organisation of the studies as well as on the establishment of “Research Centres” and “Science Boards” were developed by the project groups.

In numerous talks and within the frame of information events, the Rectorate discussed the proposals made by the project groups with the staff members of the University of Vienna. Moreover, an Internet discussion forum was instituted, where questions concerning the future structure of the organisational units and concerning the organisation of teaching at the University of Vienna were discussed.

On the basis of this preparatory work and by taking the experiences made under the University Organisation Act 1993 (Bundesgesetz über die Organisation der Universitäten – UOG 1993) into account, the Rectorate prepared this proposal for the Organisation Plan of the University of Vienna. In accordance with the basic assumptions of the “Basic Parameters”-paper, with a number of proposals made by the project groups as well as with the opinions expressed by members of the staff of the University of Vienna in numerous discussions, this Organisation Plan contains a manageable number of organisational units. There is a strong commitment to a two-level structure, in which the control of performance and costs can be managed best, and there are also proposals for the “internal structure” (Binnenstruktur). According to the Rectorate’s opinion, with such an organisational model, the prerequisites which ensure the functioning of an “agreement culture” (Vereinbarungskultur) in the future can be established, in which the achievements of individual scientists and/or of individual working groups are taken into account and which also strengthens the University of Vienna as an institution with a distinguishable profile in global competition.

October 2006 Amendment to the Organisation Plan: Establishment of the Centre for Molecular Biology

Subsequent to the establishment of the Medical University of Vienna as of January 1, 2004, the University of Vienna and the Medical University of Vienna jointly endeavoured to foster their co-operation in the field of molecular life sciences. Founded in March 2005, the Max F. Perutz Laboratories (MFPL), a joint venture of the two universities, form the organisational link.

Already in 2004, the Medical University of Vienna formed a distinct organisational unit for the groups situated in the Dr.-Bohr-Gasse Campus Vienna Biocenter. In summer 2006, agreement was reached with the Deans of the Faculties of Life Sciences and of Chemistry as well as with representatives of the University of Vienna’s scientists working at Campus Vienna Biocenter to establish a Center for Molecular Biology as a distinct organisational unit of the University of Vienna. After the Senate of the University of Vienna, in October 2006, unanimously adopted the corresponding amendments to the organisation plan proposed by the Rectorate, the University Board unanimously approved these amendments on October 13, 2006. As of January 1, 2007, the Center for Molecular Biology of the University of Vienna in Dr.-Bohr-Gasse was established.

The Center for Molecular Biology enables the groups of the University of Vienna that work at Campus Vienna Biocenter in the field of molecular biology to share a common organisational unit. Establishing a distinct organisational unit within the University of Vienna is the logical step in the continued efforts to create an innovative framework for inter-university co-operation and the definition of focuses with the Medical University of Vienna. Through the two organisational units, the Department of Medical Biochemistry (Medical University of Vienna) and the Centre for Molecular Biology (University of Vienna), connected via MFPL, co-operation with the other research institutions present at Campus Vienna Biocenter can be facilitated and improved. These structural reforms will be complemented by the establishment of a number of young research groups in the upcoming years.

This strengthening is important in order to improve the general conditions for participation in current research policy activities such as the new funding schemes of the European Research Council (ERC), and the “Excellence Initiatives” of the Austrian Science Fund (FWF) and of the Austrian Research Promotion Agency (FFG).

Denomination of the Organisational Units

The choice for the name “Fakultät” (Faculty) for the organisational units (Organisationseinheiten) is linked to the long history of the University of Vienna. This name is internationally established and accepted.

After taking all available criteria into consideration and after numerous university-internal talks, as well as after taking the recommendations by the University Board (Universitätsrat) into consideration, the existing Organisation Plan provides for a division of the University of Vienna into 15 Faculties and three Centres:

1. Faculty of Catholic Theology
 2. Faculty of Protestant Theology
 3. Faculty of Law
 4. Faculty of Business, Economics and Statistics
 5. Faculty of Computer Science
 6. Faculty of Historical and Cultural Studies
 7. Faculty of Philological and Cultural Studies
 8. Faculty of Philosophy and Education
 9. Faculty of Psychology
 10. Faculty of Social Sciences
 11. Faculty of Mathematics
 12. Faculty of Physics
 13. Faculty of Chemistry
 14. Faculty of Earth Sciences, Geography and Astronomy
 15. Faculty of Life Sciences
1. Centre for Translation Studies
 2. Centre for Sports Sciences and University Sports
 3. Centre for Molecular Biology

Management of the Organisational Units

For the structure and the management of the organisational units, the law provides certain regulations that have to be reflected in the Organisation Plan:

- Pursuant to § 20, section 5 Universities Act 2002 (Universitätsgesetz 2002), only a University Professor or Associate Professor can be the Head.
- The Head is appointed by the Rectorate pursuant to § 22, section 1, subsection 5 Universities Act 2002.

The existing Organisation Plan is based on the provisions of § 22 section 1, subsection 6 of the Universities Act 2002 as well as on the notions, based on these provisions, of individual project groups concerning a definite two-level structure. As a rule, the Faculties are divided into sub-units (institutes, working groups, etc.). These form the internal structure of the Faculty.

In doing so, the aim of an optimum transparency and unambiguousness in the field of the management's tasks and responsibilities is pursued. Hereby, strategic and operational decision structures are not separated.

The rules for the appointment mode laid down by law leads to a double evidence of authority by the Rectorate and the university professors of the Faculty or Centre. For the appointment mode of the deputies, the double evidence of authority is ensured by hearing the Faculty Conference (Fakultätskonferenz).

On the one hand, a crucial task of the Head lies in the conclusion of a target agreement with the Rectorate (pursuant to § 22, section 1, subsection 6 Universities Act 2002), on the other hand in the conclusion of target agreements resulting thereof (pursuant to § 20, section 5 Universities Act 2002) with the scientific staff. In the context of talks on the target agreements, the allocation of resources within the organisational unit can be agreed upon in an outcome- and performance-oriented way. The quality of the decisions shall be assured by fixing the scope of action, by making the criteria for the decisions transparent and by informing the staff members directly.

The Head shall – for well-founded reasons and as provided for in the target agreements – have the possibility to delegate scopes of duties to the sub-units within the frame of the internal structure. However, the ultimate responsibility shall always be with the Head of the Faculty.

As has been discussed in the project groups, the heads of the organisational units shall, depending on the size of the organisational unit, be released from some of their obligations in research and teaching.

Scientific Advisory Boards

The decision for the establishment of Faculties as organisational units also involves a strategic orientation on this level of the organisation. Opinions and perspectives of external scientists not being members of the organisational unit shall therefore complement the strategic notions of the members of the organisational unit.

For this reason, the proposal of the project group Zeilinger for the establishment of “Science Boards” has been included as an essential element in the Organisation Plan.

The Scientific Advisory Board (Wissenschaftlicher Beirat) shall ensure an external perspective for the work of a Faculty and shall ensure an international networking, also for the future – a demand expressed implicitly or explicitly by all project groups.

Structuring of Organisational Units

It shall be presumed that there are no “absolute”, “timeless” criteria for the structuring of the organisation of the University. A decision as to which areas are combined is always a decision based on current, (medium term) exigencies and also has only middle-term validity. For this reason, the form of the organisation should not at all be rigid in the future, but new interconnections and developments as well as criteria for the performance shall always find their way into the continuous planning of the organisation.

Constitutive elements for the structuring of the University of Vienna are defined in the Preamble and are based on the outcomes of the project groups as well as on discussions within the University.

According to the criteria specified in the Preamble, individual subjects or combined subjects (Fächerbündel), in which basic and applied research and teaching are merging, have been combined to form Faculties.

Internal Structure

For the fulfilment of their tasks, the organisational units (Faculties) shall have an internal structuring that corresponds to the requirements of the pertinent scientific discipline. The internal structure shall mirror the form of the scientific work (e.g. research in working groups vs. research by individual researchers) and correspond as closely as possible to the actually existing working groups and/or areas of research.

In particular, provision § 8 section 2 of the Organisation Plan ensures a participation of researchers in the design of the internal structure. When creating the internal structure, it shall be particularly important for the Rectorate to ensure the highest possible autonomy of the Faculties, to integrate proposals by researchers regarding the internal structuring and to consider existing evaluation results and the current structure.

The sub-units (institutes, working groups etc.) are the primary units for research and thus are the basic units for performance evaluation and quality assurance.

Measures to strengthen the Scientific Profile of the University of Vienna

Within the University, there were demands for the establishment of Centres for Innovation and Research. The Rectorate takes account of these demands by making research platforms possible.

The formation of inter-faculty research platforms (corresponding to the project group Weigelin-Schwiedrzik) shall be possible with § 9 section 1.

Directors of the Studies Programme

Research and teaching are the core tasks of the University of Vienna. The Organisation Plan shall therefore ensure the corresponding outline conditions for a best possible fulfilment of these tasks.

Thereby, the Faculties and the Centres shall in principle be responsible for research and teaching contents; the Directors of the Studies Programme (Studienprogrammleiterinnen und Studienprogrammleiter) with the respective administrative support shall take over tasks in the fields of the organisational and legal aspects of the studies. With the consent of the Vice-Rector for Teaching, the Director of the Studies Programme can delegate matters in the field of organisational aspects of the studies to the organisational units.

At the time when the organisation plan was drafted, there were various problem areas at the University of Vienna within the organisation of the studies, mostly due to the organisational structure imposed by the then-existing legal framework, which had to be improved: insufficient co-ordination of the studies and courses offered, in part inefficient and also isolated solutions of debatable quality using a lot of resources within the organisation of the studies, incoherent adjudication in the Studies Law (Studienrecht) and only limited predictability of legal decisions for the students.

Due to the abolition of the hitherto legally determined organs for Studies Law (Studienrecht) and for the organisation of the studies, there was a necessity to (re-)regulate these areas in the Organisation Plan.

The Directors of the Studies Programme shall be members of the scientific university staff, and upon their own application, they shall in part be released from the obligations (research and teaching) within the organisational unit to which they belong, and shall be independent in their function as Director of the Studies Programme from the organisational unit to which they belong. The term of two years with an optional renewal shall also apply for the Director of the Studies Programme.

The Directors of the Studies Programme shall have a double evidence of authority in analogy with the appointment procedures for the heads of the organisational units. The heads of the organisational units and/or the organisational unit, who have teaching duties within the frame of the studies attended to, shall propose qualified persons; the appointment of the Director of the Studies Programme shall be made by the Rectorate after having heard the Senate, the students' representatives concerned, as well as the Faculty Conferences concerned.

For a continuing monitoring and optimization of the study organisation within the studies or the study of which the Director of the Studies Programme is in charge, a Studies Conference shall be established.

Such Studies Conference shall have the task to give opinions and make recommendations regarding the requirements planning as well as regarding the proposal of the teaching programme for an academic year. Apart from that, the Studies Conference may demand an evaluation of the management of the studies programme and of the studies. The Studies Conference shall advise the management of the studies programme in all matters of the organisation of the studies (like for instance the design of the enrolment for courses, the design of counselling and information for students, etc.) and shall be requested to make suggestions for an improvement of the conditions of the studies.

The Director of the Studies Programme and his or her staff members shall be the central contact point for students in all administrative matters of the studies and shall therefore be located in an area close to the students. When fulfilling his or her duties within the field of the administration of teaching and exams, the Director of the Studies Programme initially, if possible, made use of existing structures. By now, special Service Centers and Service Points have been established.

The question of bringing about an offer of courses for one semester and/or academic year has been of very special concern during the discussions preceding the approval of the organisation plan. As a result of a number of debates, the following approach is now proposed: the Director of the Studies Programme shall, after the Rectorate has established with him or her the demand for teaching in the studies or the study to be realised (curricula or curriculum), agree on the teaching programme for each semester or academic year with the organisational units. Hereby, the Director of the Studies Programme shall, as a first step, assume the organisational planning oriented at the demand (number of courses, parallel courses etc., by taking the students' needs into account). As a second step, the Director of the Studies Programme shall prepare a proposal for meeting the demand (qualified teaching staff in the examination courses, ...). These efforts shall be made in cooperation with the Studies Conference. Proposals made by the teaching staff shall be drawn into consideration.

The proposal can be rejected by the Dean for justified reasons. After the Director of the Studies Programme and the heads of organisational units have agreed on the teaching programme, the Dean shall consign and/or commission the university teachers of their organisational units to hold specified courses.

The coordination of the Directors of the Studies Programme for the University as a whole shall be effected by the Rectorate by means of a permanent "Conference of the Directors of the Studies Programme".

The visibility for a scientific field pursued within the international scientific landscape shall thus be guaranteed. The Faculty shall depict its spectre of disciplines with its sub-units.

A sub-unit shall be characterized by its relatedness to the subject or shall pursue joint scientific aims. It shall at all events fulfil the following functions:

- Quality assurance: the sub-units of the Faculties shall form the units of quality assurance for the scientific performance.
- Staff: members of the scientific university staff shall be attributed to sub-units. For justified reasons, they can be attributed to several sub-units; in this event, the share of the attribution shall be defined. The technical-administrative staff can be attributed to sub-units or to administrative service units of the Faculty.

- Resources: the Dean shall ensure that the sub-units are workable on the basis of the evaluation results, the target agreements and the development planning of the University as well as of the Faculty.
