

universität wien

Asteroid Day 2017

The 1.5m Telescope at the Schöpfl

The Leopold Figl Observatory is an observing station of the department of Astrophysics at the University of Vienna and operates the largest mirror telescope in Austria.

The topic “minor bodies in the solar system” is one of the major observing programs carried out with the telescope. The presentation will address how these observations are obtained and what scientific results are derived from them.