Facilitating Indigenous Community on the Internet: The Rotuma Case

The paper will focus on ways that websites can be used to promote cultural preservation and the maintenance of community in the face of Diaspora. The Rotuma Website, created and maintained by the author, will be used as an example of some ways these goals can be pursued. The range of materials included in the website and their rationale will be considered, as will the logistics of maintaining such a website, the role of webmaster, and a range of ethical issues.

Alan Howard
Dept. of Anthropology
University of Hawaii Honolulu
HI 96822
USA
alanhoward@hawaii.rr.com